

Submit My Blog: The Basics

The foremost question on the minds of most up and coming bloggers is "Why should I submit my blog to directories?" The answers to this question are quite varied, with some opting to submit to several blog directories at a time, with others failing to see much point in it. What I have learned through extensive research and experience however, is that I get consistently good results when I submit my blog to a few different blog directories a short time after launching them.

What I quickly learned when I submit my blog to blog directories was that I was able to garner backlinks in a fairly short time. The result was that my websites became more "attractive" to search engines, which indexed them more readily and in turn caused them to achieve a higher ranking in search engine results pages.

The interesting thing is how much importance search engines place on these links. In most cases, search engines rank pages that have such links higher, since they are generally considered to be more worthy of linking to. It was this realization that allowed me to get favorable results after I submit my blog to a few directories. The directory listings themselves don't actually generate more visitors.

There is a bit of dispute about the proper number of blog directories to submit my blog to. Opinions range from the modest to the outlandish, with some people of the thinking that I should submit my blog to as many different blog directories as I could manage.

Many web experts agree that as little as 5 to 10 blog directories may actually be more than enough. For although search engines are attracted to sites that have plenty of links, they are more likely to place a higher value on links that are featured on on topic posts and articles, as opposed to those that come from blog directories.

My primary concern at this point was how to find blog directories that I could submit my blog to. A simple online search for "blog directory" will actually get you hundreds of potential directories to check out. In most cases, the blog directories that can be the most advantageous to you will appear on the top of the page.

There are many blog directories that have specific rules about posting backlinks. I thought that I would be better off skipping those, as there are certainly many other directories that allow me to submit my blog without complicating matters too much.

Most blog directories let you go through the submission process fairly quickly, while others may require a lot more time. I don't even bother with directories that overcomplicated the process, and opted to submit to those that made it easy for me to submit my blog. This gave me more time to work on my content and generate new links that way.
