

Blogging, a medium of change

Blogging is a relatively new concept which has originated since the inception of the Internet. Basically, blogging is an informal speech with the freedom to express personal ideas and thoughts using internet as a prime medium. People who write blogs are known as bloggers. Now, professional bloggers have taken the concept a step further and developed it into a more professional rhetoric which includes the most common concepts found in Journalism. Blogging is sub divided into many categories including personal blogs, corporate blogs and question blogs.

Most recent trends in blogging involve the use of video and pictures, a concept which has given rise to video blogging. Blogging differs from the available literally content due to its informal style. Blogging has gain wide spread acceptance around the world because it provides writers much more freedom than the typical press. Blogging provides bloggers more freedom of choice and ideas. Furthermore, Internet has provided bloggers a medium to express their views without being dictated on the style of writing. According to the Wired Magazine there were approximately seventy seven million readers of Internet blogs in United States alone which further its claim to one of the most dynamic medium of communications. It might well be the most preferred choice among readers and writes. Other articles You tube acoustic guitar - Funny birthday poem for a boyfriend -

About the Author

Topics related to blog, browse to blogskinny.com/?100-questions-to-ask-your-boyfriend&AID=3126.

Source: <http://ArticleJoy9.com>