A sizeable percentage of international community has been left behind even as the information age has taken the world by storm. For the most part they were the baby boomers who remained wedded to their age old office equipment such the telephone, typewriter, fax and the photocopier. There are also those who did not have the opportunity early on in their lives to tune into the technological age. For this class of people, many a business opportunity has gone by or their businesses are stagnating because of the lack of computer familiarity. This is where turnkey software comes in handy.

The very term turnkey implies that you just have to Turn the Key and the door would open. In other words, the software is so designed that even a computer novice can operate it effortlessly. This means that there is no need for a consumer to know the intricacies of a computer program to get it to work for his business. Instead that is done by the turnkey software developer. Turnkey software makes use of the graphic user interface or GUI wherein the information required to be manipulated is presented in as pictorial a format as is possible. Turnkey software are designed with the holistic client needs in mind. The software specialists look at all angles of a customers business to help blend the hardware as well as software the right way.

Turnkey software solutions are offered not just to the big guns of the business industry, but also to small enterprises and SOHO operators. Let us take an example of a travel agency. Without a turnkey software, a travel business would plateau out as the power of the web and the technology are not available. The business opportunity offered by building a travel company around turnkey software is simply enormous. The software would enable the tour company to spread its reach to the far corners of the world, make bookings, keep track of payments, customer feedback and a host of other things which any business requires. Turnkey software also help a company become more effective. The technology helps reduce outflow which include costs of employing additional manpower. With turnkey software in place, at the core of a business, the opportunity to generate substantial profits increases tremendously. Turnkey software today forms the heart of all businesses big and small. Almost all utilities are running on turnkey software. This includes airlines, transportation, supermarkets, courier services, banks, etc. The business opportunity in the turnkey software industry works both ways, for the developers and the users. On the one hand, developers benefit from the experience gained in developing software modeled for the needs of a client. This helps them get over the bugs in the software so that the later iterations are better and run smoothly. As for the client, his turnover is augmented by having a more or less automated business process; this means greater control, transparency and efficiency and bigger profits.
